

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

EDITOR'S PREFACE.

THE preparation of a series of volumes which should, in one form or other, furnish the student with systematic guidance to the materials for American history in foreign archives, was from the foundation of the Department of Historical Research in the Carnegie Institution of Washington contemplated as one of its most important functions. Vast stores of such materials lie in those archives, usually as the result of America's former colonial condition. As the consequence of that colonial relation, too, it often happens that the fundamental official series giving the history of government in America are rather to be found in the archives of the mother country than in those of the United States or the states. Yet the exploitation for historical purposes of these rich materials, a task for America rather than for European countries to undertake, has been carried out only partially and with little system, for the purposes of individual historians or at most of individual states.

The Department of Historical Research in the Carnegie Institution has set itself to remedy these defects in the documentation of American history, and has chosen as the first step in methodical exploitation the preparation of guides to the material, of the nature of general surveys of what is contained in individual archives or groups of archives. Three such guides have reached an advanced stage of preparation. The first is the present volume. Second stands a much larger book, now in the press, a Guide to the Materials for the History of the United States to 1783 in London Archives, in the British Museum, and in the Manuscript Collections of Oxford and Cambridge, prepared with elaborate care by Professor Charles M. Andrews of Bryn Mawr College, with assistance from Miss Frances G. Davenport of this Department. Thirdly, we have ready for the press a Guide to the Materials for the History of the United States in Spanish Archives (Simancas, the Archivo Historico Nacional and Seville), prepared by Professor William R. Shepherd of Columbia University. The next to be undertaken will be similar guides to materials in the archives of Paris and Mexico, the former by Mr. Waldo G. Leland of this Department, the latter by Professor Herbert E. Bolton of the University of Texas.

The mode of treatment adopted in such handbooks will vary according to the situation in which the materials lie in the repositories explored. Where large masses of papers or continuous series of manuscript volumes relate to American history, as in the Public Record Office in London, the first stage of action in the preparation of guide-books will be that of summary description, and inventories or calendars will come later. Where the materials for the history of the United States lie scattered in lesser quantities through many series, as in the archives of Rome, or have been accumulated not by continuous official action but by the casual operation of gift or purchase, as in the British Museum, the making of itemized lists or calendars must usually be undertaken at the beginning, as the first stage. Extended printing, of what most deserves to be printed, will in either instance be the ultimate stage of procedure.

That of the many manuals of this sort which the Department has projected a Guide to the Archives of Cuba should be the first printed is an accident. Those archives are neither so important nor so typical, in their relations to the history of the United States, as to demand that the proposed series should be headed by this publication. Indeed they contain, in some of their most important series, as may be seen from Mr. Pérez's account of their history, but casual fragments of what they formerly contained, due rather to the imperfection with which attempts to deport the Cuban archives to Spain were executed than to any careful plan of division; and have also suffered severe losses of more casual origin. Yet when we consider the fate which has befallen the portions transferred to Spain, and the perils which constantly beset archives in the tropics, we may be thankful that so much has been preserved and is accessible in Havana to our students.

In view of these facts as to the composition of the national archives of Cuba, and of the continuing uncertainty as to their ultimate installation and arrangement, it has seemed that the only practicable mode of showing what they contain for the history of the United States and of Cuban relations with our country was, after sufficiently describing the archives and the official order of series, to abandon frankly the latter, and list the documents, or bundles or groups of documents bearing on United States history, in an order determined first by the chief divisions of the subject matter, and under them by chronology. But it should be understood that these lists make no pretension to exhaustive completeness, which, in the given time and under the given conditions, was unattainable.

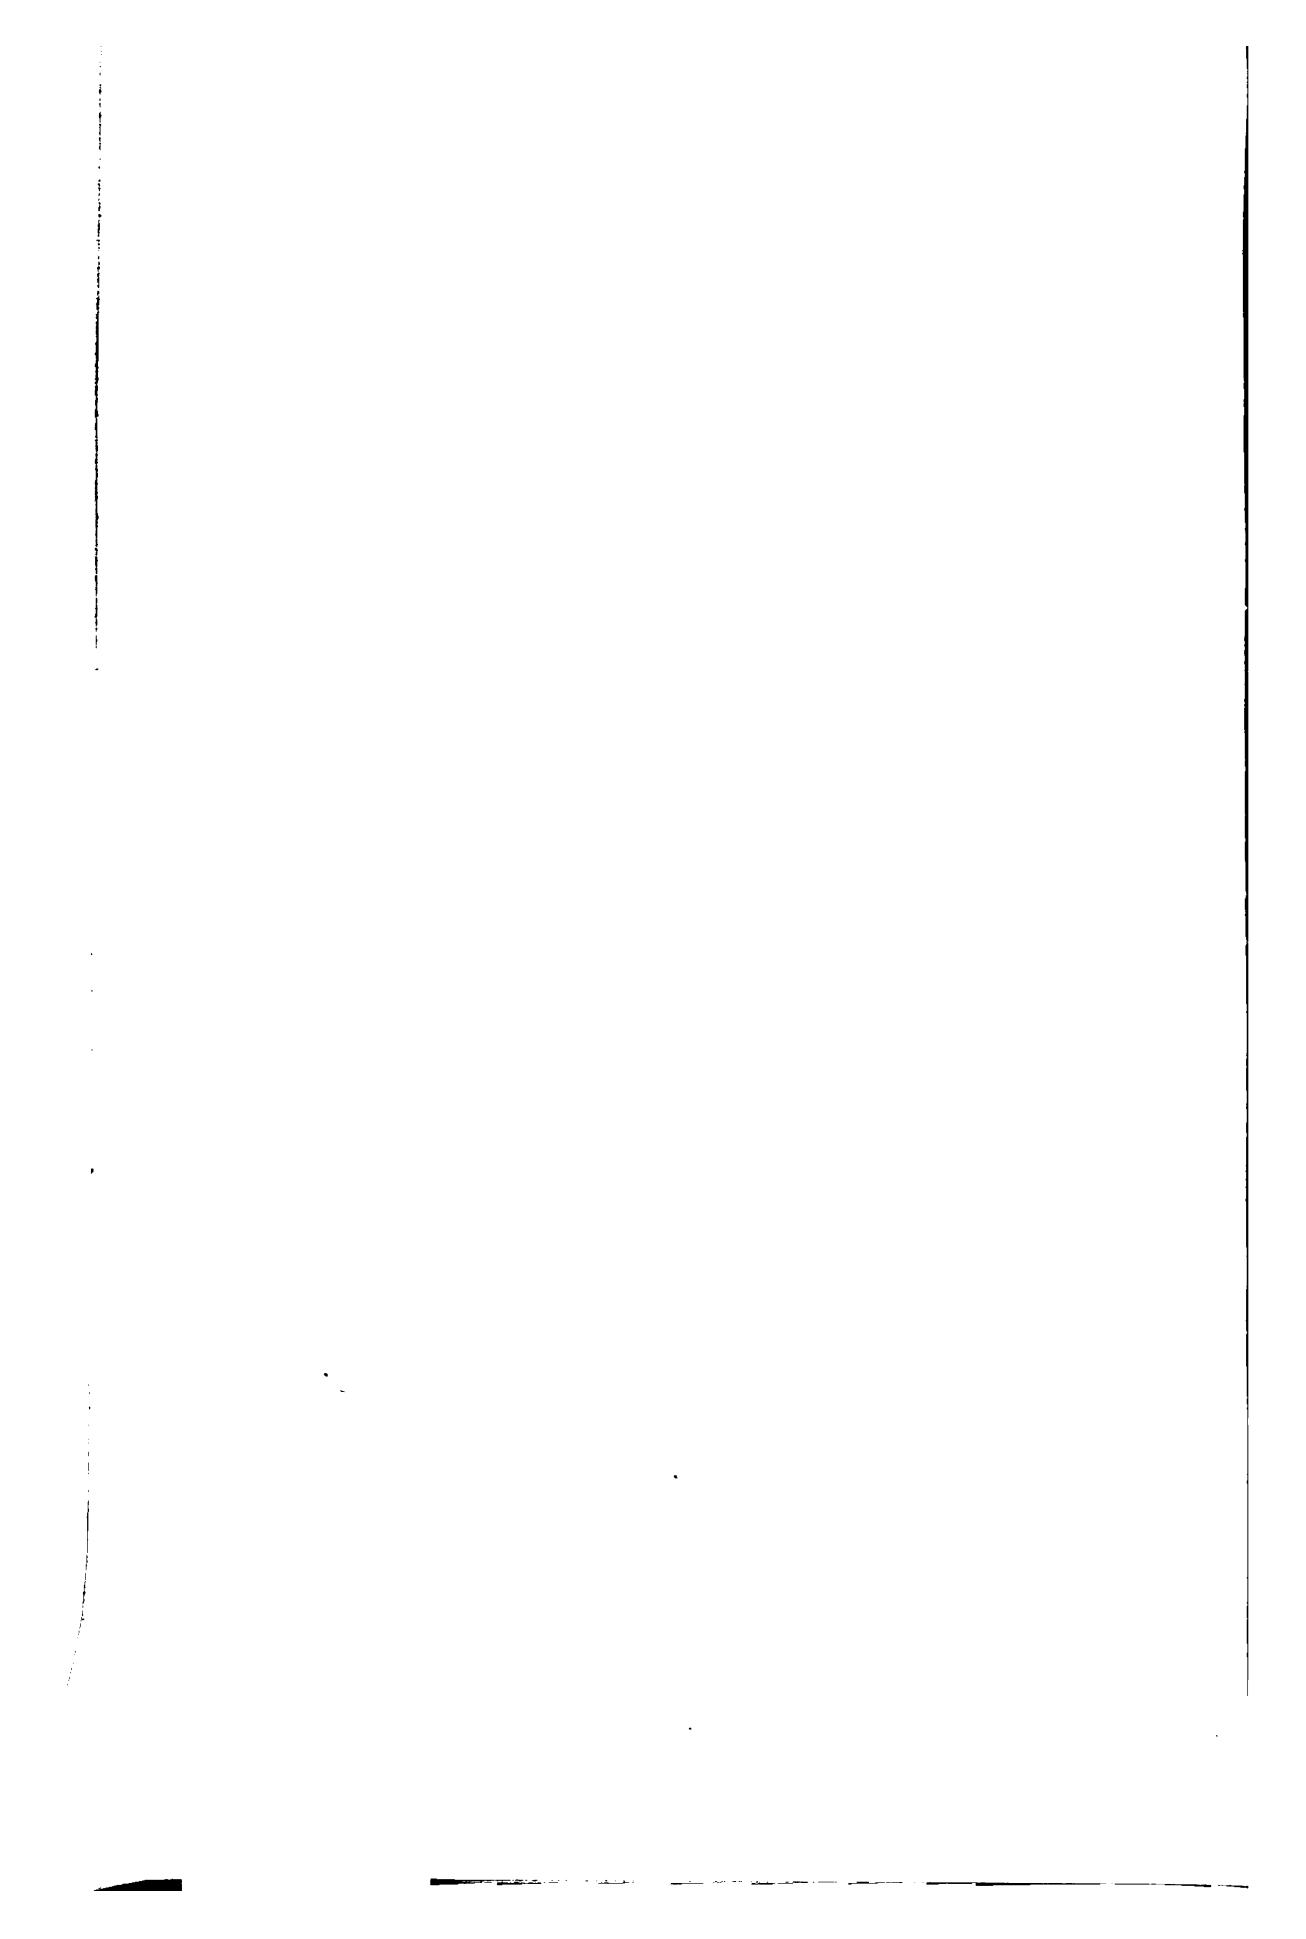

Mr. Pérez's mission began in June, 1905; he returned from Cuba in December, 1906. The thanks of the Department are due to the officials of the National Archives of Cuba, and especially to Señor José D. Poyo, director of the archives, and Señor Júlio Ponce de Leon, assistant archivist, whose aid was constant and of the highest

AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

THE following report contains first a brief account or description of the Cuban archives, of the various classes or series of papers to be found in them, and of the administration of Cuba during the colonial period; in the second place, lists of documents arrayed by subjects. The documents which exist in the Cuban archives relating to the United States are scattered through various classes or series of papers, and the archives themselves, moreover, are not systematically arranged. Therefore it was not feasible to follow the order of classes, and the subject arrangement was deemed much the best under the circumstances.

Since the following pages were written the Archivo Nacional, with which this report mainly deals, has suffered a change of fortune. During last August it was violently and summarily removed from the Cuartel de la Fuerza to the building known as the National Armory (Armería Nacional) on Compostela Street. It was found necessary to quarter troops in the Cuartel de la Fuerza; the archives were thrown out of the building by groups of laborers working both day and night, and the documents were treated as though they were only so much rubbish. In a very few days the labor of five years was in a great measure undone. The half-dozen employees of the Archive made every effort to prevent, as far as possible, the destruction and confusion of the papers, and have since done their best to repair the damage. But many hundreds of bundles came apart and their scattered contents now occupy three or four large rooms. Documents of every description have been piled in utter disorder one upon another, and it will require many months to restore these papers to some sort of order. Meanwhile a great many legajos containing important documents are missing from their respective series. Fortunately, owing to the zeal of Señor Julio Ponce de Leon, the bundles containing the Florida and Louisiana papers escaped without damage.

While the Archive was in the Cuartel de la Fuerza the government made scant provision for the care and classification of the documents. Since last August, when the necessity has been a hundredfold more pressing, the appropriation has been reduced, and nothing whatever has yet been applied to repair the mischief of that time. While not attempting to fix the responsibility for this neglect, it is impossible not to raise a protest against the state of things which prevails, and to recommend to the government a thorough investigation into the condition of the Archive, and the better care and organization of an institution so beneficial to the country. It is especially important that the building should be made as secure as possible against fire.

LUIS M. PÉREZ.

HAVANA, April, 1907.

[At the moment of going to press (June 30, 1907) it is possible, through the kindness of the Secretary of War and of the Provisional Governor of Cuba, to supply late information as to the state of the Cuban National Archives, derived from a report made to the Provisional Governor, for the benefit of this volume, by Major E. St. J. Greble, U. S. A., adviser to the Department of Gobernación. The Department of Public Works has made progress with the shelving of the present archive-building, and four laborers have been furnished, with whose aid the documents, especially those from the broken legajos, are being placed where they will be preserved from further injury and can gradually be sorted. While it is not in all instances possible to identify the classes of material mentioned in the report with those designated by Mr. Pérez in the following pages, it appears from its statements and from the latest information received from him that the civil and criminal court records, the realengos (see p. 8), the maps and plans (p. 18), the reales cédulas y órdenes (pp. 19, 112-116), the papers of the final Cuban revolution (p. 22), and the Florida and Louisiana papers (pp. 76-111), are reported as having been preserved intact; that while the large series of papers of the gobierno superior civil (pp. 13-18) have to a considerable extent been put back into shape, several hundred legajos of them are missing or disorganized; that the same must be said of some two hundred volumes of customs papers, of three hundred legajos of the expedientes de intendencia (pp. 19, 20), of forty legajos of correspondence of the intendancy, of fifteen legajos of the tribunal de cuentas (pp. 113-115), of many of the records relating to the purchase and sale of lands in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, of twenty-five legajos of the bienes embargados series (pp. 8, 20), and of five legajos of the valuable Villanova Papers (p. 21). Meantime, with the aid of two additional clerks, a card-index of the archives has been begun.—J. F. J.]

EXPLANATIONS.

DOCUMENTS are cited by giving the text of the "brief," or descriptive heading which they bear. The language of these is not strictly adhered to, but is often slightly modified, abridged or expanded in the interest of clearness or brevity. In many cases the briefs or titles are interesting in themselves and have been reproduced, for that reason, without change.

In most cases where the document had no title, the description has been given in English; but the text of all documents is in Spanish, unless otherwise specified.

The term legajo is a technical term synonymous with the word bundle.

The term expediente is a technical term meaning practically a group of papers on a given subject (see p. 10).

The Index is of subjects as well as names.

ABBREVIATIONS.

THE CUBAN ARCHIVES

INTRODUCTION.

THE mission to the Cuban archives, of which these pages are the outcome, was undertaken for the purpose of making known what materials, if any, existed in those repositories bearing upon the history of the United States. In addition to materials on the relations between that country and Cuba, there was a strong presumption, which the results have confirmed, that there might still be found at Havana portions of the Louisiana and Florida archives which were taken there in 1819, but removed to Spain (in part or in whole) in the years 1888 and 1889.

Before presenting lists or calendars of the documents which were discovered, it seems proper, and indeed requisite to an understanding of the items composing the lists, that some account of the Cuban archives, their vicissitudes and their actual conditions should be given. The documents are in the Archivo Nacional at Havana, except a few, relating to the ecclesiastical history of Louisiana and the Floridas, which are in the archives of the bishopric of Havana.

The Archivo Nacional contains practically all the archives of the old Spanish government which remain in the island, as well as a great mass of material from the municipal and provincial archives, and is, therefore, the great storehouse of Cuban records of all descriptions. It is the lineal successor of the Archivo General, the general depository at Havana into which the Spanish government gathered all its archives, but which was relieved of a great part of its contents and left in utter confusion by that government when it retired from the island in 1898.

HISTORY OF THE HAVANA ARCHIVES.

In the year 1857, on recommendation of the Captain-general Concha, it was decreed by real orden that there should be a common depository, to be known as the Archivo General, for the collection, preservation and organization of the various archives of the government of the island.<sup>1</sup> The documents which were not required for the current transaction of business in the various offices or departments were to be deposited with the General Archives. The principal archives of the island at that time were: 1, those of the Hacienda or Intendencia, which consisted of several archives, namely, those of the Intendencia proper (Secretaría de la Intendencia), of the Tribunal de Cuentas, of the Contaduría General, of the Superintendencia, and of the customs (Rentas marítimas); 2, those of the civil government and captaincy-general, including the records of the Comisión Militar; 3, those of the provincial governments; 4, those of the ayuntamientos or municipalities; and, 5, those of the chief courts, the audiencias of Puerto Príncipe, Havana and Santiago de Cuba. Each of these classes of papers will be taken up individually in the course of this report.

In 1857 the archives of the Intendencia,<sup>2</sup> which had been kept in the Real Factoría, or arsenal, were removed to a section of the ancient convent of Saint Francis, which served as the custom-house, and in the following year, or in subsequent years, the other archives were transferred, in part or in whole, to this building, thus forming the general archives of the government of Cuba. At no period was the public permitted to make personal use of the archives or of any part of them. But Spanish officials or persons associated with the government were in some cases given access to the documents. Both Jacobo de la Pezuela and Justo Zaragoza, for instance, drew materials from them for their histories, but nowhere has there been found any printed statement in regard either to the contents or to the organization of the Archivo General. We know, however, in a very general way that they contained, prior to 1888, a great mass of materials of the utmost importance for the history of Cuba, of Louisiana and the Floridas, and to a less extent for the history of Mexico and parts of the southern mainland.

By real orden of March 27, 1888, the captain-general was informed that His Majesty's government had resolved to complete the rich collection of documents of the Archivo de Indias, at Seville, and he was at the same time instructed to send to Spain, from the convent of Saint Francis, the entire archives of Florida (meaning those of Louisiana and the two Floridas) and the archives of the mainland, including the correspondence of the captains-general of Guatemala and Venezuela, and the historical material up to the middle of the eighteenth century, especially that relating to the captaincies-general and to pirates and filibusters. The real orden was not carried out in 1888 and the attention of the captain-general was called to the omission by a real orden of January 8, 1884. It was not however till 1888, when the real orden of 1883 was repeated under date of April 19, that the documents were actually sent to Spain.<sup>1</sup>

Between June, 1888, and June, 1889, twelve shipments were made, comprising in all 2386 legajos, containing nearly all the historical material to which any value was attached which existed in the Archivo General, and which it was not thought necessary to retain in the island <sup>1</sup> The following is the text of the real orden. Its vagueness indicates the ignorance which prevailed regarding the character of the documents at Havana.

Por Real orden de 27 de Marzo de 1888 se dijo á ese Gobierno General lo siguiente, "Exmo. Sr. Dispuesto el Gobierno de S. M. á completar la rica colección de documentos del Archivo de Indias, piensa ordenar la traslación á dicho Establecimiento de todos los papeles relativos á nuestra historia en America que se hallen en el Archivo de Simancas ó en otros depositos de la Peninsula. Con el mismo objeto y de orden de S. M. Rey (q. D. g.) me dirijo á V. C. á fin de que se sirva disponer lo conveniente para que se extraigan del convento de San Francisco en esa capital el Archivo completo de la Florida que ahí existe, los papeles de Tierra-Firme que comprenden los correspondientes á las Capitanías Generales de Guatemala y Venezuela, y los de historia hasta mediados del siglo pasado, y entre ellos los relativos á las Capitanías Generales y á expediciones piráticas y filibusteras. . . ." for administrative and judicial purposes. The archives were removed under the supervision of D. Nemesio Cornejo, who had been appointed chief of the Archives of the Indies, and he no doubt executed the real orden as rigorously as was practicable. The twelve inventories of these documents are merely rough check-lists, but they show that the Louisiana and Florida archives were removed in toto (except seven or eight legajos which were probably overlooked) together with the early Santo Domingo archives, the correspondence and other papers relating to Spanish America during the wars of independence, 1811-1826, gathered at Havana to the extent of 85 legajos, and 1230 legajos of Cuban records. Practically all the information which the inventories contain may be summarized into the following statement.

Regarding the Florida and Louisiana papers, the following statement has been kindly supplied by Professor W. R. Shepherd, who on behalf of the Carnegie Institution has examined them at Seville:

"There are in the Archives of the Indies at Seville untold thousands of papers, more or less useful to the historical student, which have never been catalogued at all, save in a rough check-list of no value that accompanied the bundles when they were sent from Havana in 1888-1889. Nor had these papers been touched by any worker in the archives until after considerable trouble I prevailed upon the director to allow me to use them. The 2500 bundles, of which the collection is composed, lie in confused heaps about the floor of a cellar-like room, where dampness, dust and moths are consuming the papers; and many of them are already beyond reclaim. On account of their condition, which is a menace to the preservation of the other papers in the archives should they be brought into contact with them, these 'Cuban' documents are not supposed to be accessible to the public.

"Of these 2500 bundles of papers I should say that 1800 or 2000 relate in some way or other to the history of Florida and Louisiana during the latter part of the eighteenth century and the early part of the nineteenth. Here the English and French originals of the Spanish translations found in the regularly accessible sections of the archives are assembled in copious quantities. And more—the details of the colonial administration in all its branches, the local correspondence, private concerns, the thousand and one matters of daily life are all buried with them. To the local historian of any of the states that came from Spanish Florida and Louisiana, as well as of Kentucky and Tennessee, most of these papers are of great value; and many a nugget in this unexploited mine of the Indies is there also for the general historian of the United States. Unquestionably there are hundreds, if not thousands, of documents in this collection which bear upon the history of Mississippi during the period of Spanish occupation; for I myself in passing have seen many of them. There was no use, however, in jotting down a specific reference to them in my notes, even in cases where I might have deemed such a procedure useful, because many of the bundles have no numbers or other marks by which they may be identified, and because after the bundles have been examined, they are thrown back into the general heaps, and thus rendered almost impossible of recovery, except after a lengthy and tedious search (if successful at all), unless the official in charge be requested to put a particular bundle in some specified part of the room. True, the director of the Archives of the Indies told me last summer that, as soon as the Spanish government supplied the needful money, he would have the documents in this collection as well cared for and catalogued as any others of a similar class in the repository, but up to the present time nothing to my knowledge has been done to relieve this unfortunate situation."

There is no record of any further removal of documents from the archives in the decade following, but in 1898 the retiring Spanish government carried with it, both from the Archivo General and from the government offices, a vast amount of papers, to the extent, it is stated, of 330 cases.<sup>1</sup> These are now in part in the Archivo Histórico de la Gobernación de Cuba.

The Archivo General was left in a state of bewildering disorder by the Spanish government. According to the report made August 1, 1899, by Major T. H. Bliss, collector of customs, the papers were apparently without arrangement and guide to their contents, while the rooms and corridors containing them were in an unsanitary condition and a menace to the healthfulness of the rest of the custom-house. In addition the space occupied by them was absolutely necessary for the proper reorganization of the custom-house.<sup>2</sup>

While the archives remained in the convent of Saint Francis, under the custody of the customs department, neglected and despised, and even after their removal to the Cuartel de la Fuerza, they were ransacked by various persons in search of stamps and lottery tickets, and perhaps of other of their contents, who robbed them of all the stamps. This report states that, "Most valuable original documents of great historical importance dating as far back as the time of the discovery and colonization of America—which were saved almost miraculously from the cupidity which at various times had despoiled the archives for the benefit of the Spanish museums and collections—are found within these archives [i. e., in the Archivo Nacional]. Valuable papers relating to the conquest and occupation of Hispaniola, Peru, Mexico, and the island of Cuba, still remain there." As a matter of fact there are very few documents before 1750, and nothing, of course, in any way relating to the discovery and settlement of America.

<sup>1</sup> For this information I am indebted to Professor W. R. Shepherd. See also his article on "The Spanish Archives and their Importance for the History of the United States," in the Annual Report of the American Historical Association for 1903, pp. 169-170.

and of a large share of the tickets, and no doubt wrought other and more serious ravages. Moreover, a portion of the archives was by disposition of Major Bliss sold as waste paper to a paper factory in the Cerro, a suburb of Havana, and it is likely that some papers worth preserving perished in this way; but not the least record was kept either of the class or quantity of the papers so disposed of, by which we may judge. After the archives had been removed to the Cuartel de la Fuerza many hundreds of legajos and volumes were set aside as worthless and sold to the same paper factory,<sup>1</sup> and in this second instance also no exact record was kept of the dates and classes of the papers discarded. It can only be learned that they were mainly custom-house records, treasury receipts and the like, both ancient and recent.

For the better organization of the archives, as well as of the custom-house, Governor Wood at the close of 1899 ordered the transfer of the archives to the old fortress known as the Cuartel de la Fuerza, situated opposite the Plaza de Armas and looking directly across to the Cabafias. The foundation of this fort, the first erected at Havana, was laid in 1538 and the structure was completed by 1584. It served in early days not only as an important fortification but also as the governor's residence. It was subsequently converted into barracks and prison, and its dungeons recall many tragedies.<sup>2</sup>

The arrangement of the archives which prevailed in the convent of Saint Francis has of course disappeared, but this is probably not a great misfortune. No rational arrangement, however, is at present possible in the Cuartel de la Fuerza, on account of the very meagre accommodations which have been provided. In fact very little has been done to render the building even temporarily suitable to its present use, perhaps because the government has not yet decided upon the permanent location of the archives. The space is entirely inadequate. There are several large rooms which would be available, if by some means light and air could be admitted to them. The building has not been provided with electric lights and on cloudy days work becomes very trying. The stands, or shelves, which have been erected to accommodate the legajos, or bundles (of which ninety-nine one-hundredths of the archives consist), are of the rudest construction. In fact the poverty of the institution is everywhere in evidence. The amount appropriated during the three and a half years for both "ordinary" and "extraordinary" running expenses averages less than 610 dollars a year.<sup>1</sup> The more pressing obligations which have weighed upon the government, rather than a failure to appreciate the value of the archives, no doubt, accounts for this neglect. But as an institution which administers to the higher patriotism and culture of the nation, the Archivo Nacional deserves primary consideration from the government.<sup>2</sup>

DESCRIPTION OF THE HAVANA ARCHIVES.

The records of the Archivo Nacional are of two very distinct kinds. Considerably more than two-thirds of the material has, if any, only the most incidental historical utility, but, on the other hand, it possesses in some cases great value for judicial purposes. The great bulk of the Expedientes de Intendencia, over 1600 legajos, the Realengos and Bienes Embargados, about 300 legajos, the records of the Consejo de Administración, 118 legajos, the Expedientes de Ayuntamientos, more than 400 legajos, the Propios, the Quintos, and many others are of this class.<sup>3</sup> It is, moreover, in connection with this class

<sup>2</sup> The Boletín has this to say regarding the limitations under which the Archivo Nacional labors: "Fuerza es decir que no está tan importante oficina en condiciones de responder como debe á los requerimientos de un buen servicio. El edificio no apropiado en que se halla establecido temporalmente; el estado de espantosa confusión y desarreglo en que fué entregada la documentación por el gobierno colonial al tiempo de su evacuación de la isla, y, más que todo, el escaso personal que cuenta, que apenas si basta para la busca diaria de antecedentes de todas clases solicitados por particulares, oficinas y tribunales, absorviendo mucha parte del tiempo que pudiera invertirse en la selección y arreglo de documentos, obstáculos son en que vienen estrellándose los mejores deseos de sus empleados por ponerlo á la altura que demanda esta clase de instituciones, tan solícitamente atendidas en todos los pueblos cultos.

"Abrigamos, no obstante, la esperanza de que nuestro Gobierno, tan pronto como lo permitan los múltiples problemas que de presente tiene que resolver para la debida organización y estabilidad de la naciente República, facilitará al Archivo los recursos que necesita para ponerlo á la altura que demanda la cultura del país y las apremiantes necesidades del servicio público." Sept.-Oct., 1904, vol. IV., no. 5, p. 98.

<sup>3</sup> The Archivo Judicial which occupies the lower and outer portions of the building, and is a sort of adjunct to the Archivo National, consists of a of papers that the Archive renders most service to the government and to the public. There is a constant demand from both the government and private individuals for the records relating to specified properties, claims, and contracts made by the Spanish government. In a very considerable number of cases the right to a given property, or the legality of a certain claim, can be determined, if at all, only from documents in the Archive; and be it said that probably the titles to at least 70 per cent. of the real property of the island are more or less irregular or disputable, and probably 80 per cent. are in a state of litigation. The Archive force devotes practically all its time to searching for specified records of this description and to the arrangement and listing of these papers, and this is as it should be.

But in consequence those records whose value is primarily historical receive only the most incidental attention. They constitute less than one-third of the papers in the Archive and can be briefly enumerated: (1) the volumes of reales cédulas and órdenes, from 1523 to 1868, which belonged to the various branches of the treasury (see post, p. 19); (2) the dispatches of the intendant and super-intendant, from 1764 to 1854, 151 legajos (see pp. 14-15, "Consultas de la Real Hacienda"); (3) the expedientes relative to commerce, navigation and fisheries, 1814 to 1858, 10 legajos (see p. 16); (4) the expedientes relative to colonization at various points in the island, 1814 to 1868, 21 legajos (see p. 15); (5) the correspondence of the captains-general, 1822 to 1851, and the reales cédulas to the same official, 1812 to 1898, about 180 legajos (see pp. 20, 34-53); (6) police records, 1800 to 1881, 157 legajos (see p. 17); (7) records of the Diputacion Provincial de la Habana, 1813 to 1828, 27 legajos (see p. 16); (8) records in the matter of slaves and slavery, 1814 to 1868, 58 legajos (see p. 16); (9) records of the censorship of the press, 1811 to 1869, 31 legajos (see p. 15); (10) records of honors, titles, appointments, etc., of the chief military officials, 1818 to 1869, 11 legajos (see p. 17); (11) consular correspondence, 1821 to 1868, 24 legajos (see p. 16); (12) records of the Consulado and Junta de Fomento, 1794 to 1861, 200 legajos and 160 volumes (see p. 12); (13) the archives of Santiago de Cuba (see pp. 22, 23); (14) papers of the last insurrection, 1895 to 1898 (see p. 22); (15) Florida and Louisiana papers (see pp. 21, 76-111); and (16) the Villanova papers, 1777 to 1875, about 60 legajos (see p. 21).

number of notarial archives from Havana and other parts of the island, which have been turned over to the government. See Cuba, Civil Report, 1900, vol. I., part 2, pp. 368 and 428, civil orders nos. 194 and 298, May 11 and 30, 1900, and the Boletín, Sept.-Oct., 1903, vol. II., no. 10, p. 19.

These records do, of course, contain materials for judicial or other practical ends, but this is incidental. The essence and value of them is historical. It is, therefore, perfectly practicable to separate these records from the others and to care and make provision for them independently. They could properly be formed into an Archive of historical materials, an Archivo Histórico Nacional similar to the Division of Manuscripts of the Library of Congress, and brought into close connection with the Biblioteca Nacional.<sup>1</sup> The materials for the history of Cuba would thus receive that care which they deserve, and historical interest and education would be greatly promoted.<sup>2</sup> At the same time this measure would give greater opportunities for the arrangement and care of the other documents in the Cuartel de la Fuerza.

The limited appropriation and the crowded condition of the Archive have made it as yet impossible to cleanse the papers from the polilla. Some classes of papers are practically free from the insects, but the Archive as a whole is thoroughly infected, and some valuable papers, e. g., the expedientes de intendencia, are really in a lamentable condition. The task is a difficult one, but the polilla must be got rid of, and as soon as possible, if the papers are to be preserved.

At least 90 per cent. of the Archive is made up of legajos, that is bundles, of various sizes arranged on rough wooden shelves. Very few of them are even enclosed between pasteboards. The legajos consist either of expedientes or of loose papers, or of both. The expediente, corresponding to the French dossier, is any group of papers relating to a given subject brought together to form the history or body of proceedings on the subject. It may be any subject or incident of a subject; there may be one expediente or there may be many on the same subject; the expediente may consist of any number of documents, and there are many in the Archive ten inches thick. The documents are usually arranged in chronological order and sewed together. The ideal would be to bind the expedientes, instead of having them tied up in heavy bundles, but their number renders this impracticable. The most valuable among them ought however to be bound, and for this some appropriation should be made, as well as for the better care of all the documents in the Archive.

Nearly all the papers have been arranged in some manner and are accessible. But it has not yet been possible to undertake, even in a single case, the finer work of ultimate arrangement and cataloguing, and this will not be feasible until the government makes more ample provisions than now exist. Rough indexes or check-lists to a number of the classes have been printed in the bimonthly bulletin of the Archive, but, except in a few cases noted below, they are merely lists of docket-numbers with corresponding dates derived from the old indexes left by the Spanish government, and are often inaccurate.

<sup>1</sup> If such a thing were done a fire-proof building should by all means be provided for the Biblioteca Nacional, which in its present location is entirely unprotected against fire.

<sup>2</sup> The University of Havana has not yet a chair of local history and no higher instruction whatever is given in the history of Cuba.

For the purpose of indicating more completely the classes and character of the records in the Archive, it will be convenient, first to follow through the lists in the Boletín and then to give some account of those documents of which no list or index has yet been printed.

The Boletín<sup>1</sup> is issued bimonthly and averages twenty to twenty-two octavo pages. It contains, in addition to the indexes, unpublished documents for the history of Cuba drawn principally from the materials in the Archive.<sup>2</sup> These could scarcely be excelled in point of interest, but it is to be regretted that they are published entirely without notes or comments of any kind and that the documents sometimes extend through three or more issues, and in many cases through two. An annual, or at most a semi-annual, publication, complete in itself, would no doubt give much more satisfaction and meet with much more appreciation.

CLASSES LISTED IN THE BOLETÍN.

The records of this body, consisting of 200 legajos and 160 volumes, were declared by the late Director Vidal Morales y Morales to be the most precious documents in the Archive. They are certainly among the most important. They relate principally to commerce and navigation, to agriculture, industry and colonization, to slavery and the negro traffic and to public works. They are indexed in vol. I., nos. 1-4, of the Boletín. There is only a rough classification in the arrangement of the bundles themselves or of their contents. The index simply indicates the dates and contents of each legajo, describing in many cases the individual expedientes. About one-third of the bundles are described as of "various years" (varios años), and the others follow no strict chronological order. To find a given expediente, or documents on a given matter, it is often necessary to run through the entire index, and in many instances the description would be found very vague. The same must be said of the volumes, except that each volume is confined to a single matter. There are three legajos of the years 1821-1861 relating to the Consulado with the papers of the Gobierno Superior Civil, legajos 372-375 (Boletín, vol. III., no. 1).

The Consejo de Administración,<sup>2</sup> 1861-1897.

The functions of this body, created by real decreto of July 4, 1861, were (1) to give advice to the governor and captain-general on administrative measures calling for special legal knowledge. The captain-general was however entirely free to act contrary to its recommendations. The real business and importance of this body was however (2) that of a court for cases involving the local administration, e. g., the conflict of jurisdictions, appeals from decisions of the captain-general or other civil authorities, assessment of taxes, licenses, franchises, claims involving the public lands, or properties, the right of eminent domain, etc. The records are indexed in vol. I., no. 4, to vol. II., no. 9, of the Boletín. There are 113 legajos, containing over 700 expedientes, and 92 volumes; the bundles are by years and follow in chronological order; the expedientes of the court are listed individually, but the reports of the Consejo as an advisory board are in the form of proceedings and are of course not separately listed. On the whole this material has very slight historical interest, but is exceedingly valuable for judicial purposes.

<sup>2</sup> For an account of its functions, organization, etc., see especially the Boletín, vol. I., no. 4, pp. 7-11, and a pamphlet, Consejo de Administración de la Isla de Cuba, su Organización, Atribuciones y Modo de proceder en los Negocios Contenciosos Administrativos . . . (Habana, 1861).

Gobierno Superior Civil.

Under this heading are listed in the Boletín a variety of papers relating principally to the central civil administration of the captaincy-general. A brief account of the history and functions of this office is given on pp. 28-32. Some of the papers which are included in the Boletín do not properly belong to the civil government, e. g., the correspondence of the intendant with the home government, and the legajos relating to commerce, navigation and fisheries. They were taken over when the office of super-intendant was annexed to the office of governor and captain-general. On the other hand, the dispatches of the captain-general to the home government and the reales órdenes to him, described on pp. 34-36, certainly belong to the civil government, but are not included. The term civil is not sufficiently comprehensive, for some of the records are political, e. g., the consular correspondence, and there was in fact no political or military government distinct from the civil. What remains of the archives of the captaincy-general is a fragment; the major part of them were taken to Spain in 1898, especially that part which was in the captain-general's palace and was the most important.

The index to these papers is contained in vol. II., no. 9, to vol. III., no. 6, inclusive, of the Boletín, in the order of classes; they constitute 1671 legajos, consecutively numbered. It is not possible or necessary to enter into details regarding many of these classes, and in fact they were not all examined. The following classified account may perhaps suffice.

Ayuntamientos. The expedientes or records of the city council or municipality of Havana, over which the captain-general himself presided, so far as they were not taken to Spain or destroyed, are preserved in the Archivo Nacional. Only the minutes (or actas) dating from the middle of the sixteenth century in almost unbroken series, remain in the archive of the ayuntamiento. This material is not only an inestimable treasure for the history of Cuba, but to a great extent also for the early history of all Spanish America. The use of a manuscript collection of this description presents unfortunately innumerable difficulties. The volumes, moreover, are not kept in a fire-proof building, and this is clearly to invite their destruction. No greater service could therefore be rendered to Cuban history than the printing of the complete series of these minutes and proceedings of the cabildo, or city council, of Havana, at least up to the year 1828. An edition on modern principles, with complete indexes and critical notes, would require at least 40 volumes and an expenditure of 20,000 dollars. But is this undertaking beyond the patriotism and historical appreciation of the ayuntamiento of Havana? The actas of the city council of Santiago de Cuba extend back to an even earlier date. The alcalde of that city, now senator, Señor Emilio Bacardí, has published in the Revista Municipal de Santiago de Cuba a great deal of data from these minutes of the greatest value, and has in preparation a historical work based on this material. The publication of these extensive actas of Santiago de Cuba is probably beyond realization for some generations, but such a precious treasure should be zealously cared for, and to keep it in a building or apartment which is not fire-proof is unpardonable.

The expedientes of the city councils concern, in the vast number of cases, property rights, public works, franchises and the like, and have very rarely any historical interest, though great judicial usefulness. The number of legajos, representing nearly all the ayuntamientos of the island, is at least 371 (legajos nos. 1-371). These include the Propios relative to municipal and rural taxation, and also the Presupuestos, i. e., the municipal budgets, etc. They date principally between 1840 and 1868; in some cases from 1822; only two legajos are of an earlier date. They are all arranged in a single rough chronological order, irrespective of locality, and the expedientes are not individually listed. The index is therefore only a check-list to the number of the legajo, the date and the ayuntamiento corresponding.

Acueductos y Puentes. Four bundles, years 1826 to 1854, relative to aqueducts and bridges. Legajos nos. 376-379.<sup>1</sup>

Alamedas y Paseos. Four bundles, years 1815 to 1860, relative to malls and public walks. Legajos nos. 380-383.

Bienes de Regulares. Eight bundles, years 1768 to 1865, relative to the properties of regulars, especially of the Oratory of St. Philip of Neri. Legajos nos. 384-391.

Beneficencia y Caridad. Fifty-eight bundles, years 1870 to , relative to charitable institutions, hospitals, asylums, poor-houses, etc. Legajos nos. 392-449.

Consultas de la Real Hacienda. These are the dispatches of the intendant to the home government. The office was created in 1764 and merged into the captaincy-general in 1856. From the year 1812 the intendant of Havana was also super-intendant of the whole island. Some account of the history of the two offices is given on pp. 28-32.

These dispatches, termed consultas, with their numerous enclosures, constitute for historical purposes one of the most precious collections in the Archive and form practically a complete series. The dispatches of the first intendant, Miguel de Altarriba, begin in January, 1766, with number 662. The earlier dispatches, from 1746 to 1766, nos. 1-661, are from the captains-general Juan de Prado and the Conde de Ricla. The series consists of 153 bundles, legajos nos. 450-602, in the order of years. The index in the Boletín gives merely the number of the legajos with the corresponding year or years and the particular ministries to which the dispatches were addressed. The number and dates however do not always agree; the legajo of a stated year will very often contain some dispatches of the preceding or of the following year. The dispatches are all numbered, each intendant beginning a new series. But in the bundles the arrangement is not always consecutive; in many instances earlier numbers will be found after later ones, perhaps in the legajo next following. There is missing from the series a dispatch here and there, and more frequently an enclosure, but the file as a whole is substantially complete.<sup>1</sup> Many of the missing dispatches are among the Villanova papers.

This material is of surpassing interest. It is a storehouse for the financial, economic and commercial history of the island, containing incidentally many items for the history of other parts of America. There is a good deal of information on the negro traffic, on immigration, on adjudications in cases of prizes and contraband, on pensions, on appointments, on fortifications, on the equipment of the army and navy, on the public domain, on concessions and franchises, etc., in addition to information on general financial and commercial administration and policy, involving political history to a large degree.

Corredores. Thirteen bundles, years 1832 to 1869, relative to rural police and police agents. Legajos nos. 603-615.

Cimarrones. Fourteen bundles, years 1824 to 1864, relative to fugitive slaves. Legajos nos. 616-629.

Colonización. Twenty-one bundles, years 1814 to 1868, relative to the establishment of colonies at various points in the island. Legajos nos. 630-650.

Censura de Imprenta. Thirty-one bundles, years 1811 to 1869, relative to the censorship of the press. Legajos nos. 651-681.

Caminos, Puentes y Canales de Navegación y Riego. Nine bundles, years 1800 to 1853, relative to roads, bridges and canals for navigation and irrigation. Legajos nos. 682-690.

<sup>1</sup> The last five bundles, nos. 598 to 602, years 1853 to 1856, contain dispatches of the captains-general Pesuela and Concha, in their capacity as superintendants.

Comercio, Navegación y Pesca. Ten bundles, years 1814 to 1858, relative to commerce, navigation and fisheries. Legajos nos. 691-700.

Cárceles, Cuarteles y Casas de Gobierno. Twelve bundles, years 1770 to 1860, relative to prisons, barracks, city-halls, and public buildings. Legajos nos. 701-712.

Culto y Clero. Sixty-one bundles, years 1799 to 1861, relative to ecclesiastical affairs. Legajos nos. 713-773.

Calamidades y Donativos. Eleven bundles, years 1826 to 1863, relative to official and popular donations made on occasions of public calamities or of special needs, e. g., for the African war, 1860. Legajos nos. 774-784.

Cartas de Domicilio. Twenty-nine bundles, years 1819-1869, relative to naturalization of Chinese and Yucatanese, and to foreigners domiciled in the island. Legajos nos. 785-813.

Correos y Postas. Twenty-three bundles, years 1823 to 1866, relative to the postal service. Legajos nos. 814-836.

Consules. Twenty-four bundles, years 1809 to 1871. These contain dispatches to the captain-general from Spanish consuls in foreign countries, principally from the consuls at New York, New Orleans, Key West, Vera Cruz and Kingston, Jamaica. Also correspondence of the captain-general with the foreign consuls in the island, and some miscellaneous expedientes. The bulk of the material is of no importance, and there is no arrangement, except that the legajos follow a rough chronological order. Many of the dispatches from the consuls mentioned above are interesting for the information or statements which they contain regarding filibustering expeditions and the activities of Cuban revolutionists. The communications from the consul at Kingston, Jamaica, deal very fully with the problem of emancipation in the British West Indies and Haiti. Legajos nos. 844-846 contain the interesting correspondence between the captain-general and the British Consul-general and Superintendent of Liberated Africans, David Turnbull. The Villanova papers contain a good deal of consular correspondence, which may have been extracted from these bundles. Legajos nos. 837-860.

Diputación de la Habana. Twenty-seven bundles, years 1813 to 1823, containing the minute-books (actas) and expedientes of the Diputación de la Habana. Legajos nos. 861-887.

Dispensas de Matrimonios. Fifty-eight bundles, years 1812 to 1879, relative to the right to contract marriage of parties not having the consent of parents or guardians. Legajos nos. 888-935.

Esclavitud. Fifty-eight bundles, years 1814 to 1816, relative to the sale and emancipation of slaves, to fugitive slaves and police regulations. Legajos nos. 986-993. Cf. Cimarrones, above.

Espectáculos Públicos. Ten bundles, years 1826 to 1868, relative to public shows, theatres, bull-fights, etc. Legajos nos. 994-1003.

Empleados. Three bundles, years 1821 to 1867, relative to employees and the organization of the government offices. Legajos nos. 1004-1006.

Ferrocarriles. Fourteen bundles, years 1845 to 1868, relative to the construction and regulation of railroads. Legajos nos. 1007-1020.

Gobernación y Fomento. One hundred and twenty-eight bundles, years 1748 to 1868, relative to a variety of administrative matters,—municipal affairs, agriculture, colonies, employments, prisons, etc. Legajos nos. 1021-1148.

Hacienda. Sixty-nine bundles, years 1730 to 1868, relative to the treasury administration and treasury accounts. The earlier bundles no doubt belonged to the archive of the Intendencia. Legajos nos. 1149-1217.

Honores, Condecoraciones, Tomas de Posesión y Juicios de Residencia de Generales. Eleven bundles, years 1818 to 1869, relative to titles, appointments, promotions and records of the chief military officials of the island. Legajos nos. 1218-1228.

Juegos Prohibidos. Six bundles, years 1812 to 1856, relative to prohibited games. Legajos nos. 1229-1234.

Licencias. Thirty-two bundles, years 1814 to 1855, relative to licenses. Legajos nos. 1235-1266.

Milicias de Color. Two bundles, years 1859 to 1860, relative to the colored militia. Legajos nos. 1267-1268.

Marina. Twenty-eight bundles, years 1819 to 1869, relative to coast defense, to harbors, piers, light-houses, etc. Legajos nos. 1269-1296.

Mayorazgo y Testamentarias. Two bundles, years 1820 to 1862, relative to the execution of wills and inheritance by primogeniture. Legajos nos. 1297-1298.

Monedas. Two bundles, years 1817 to 1857, relative to the currency. Legajos nos. 1299-1300.

Obras Públicas. Twenty-three bundles, years 1779 to 1893, relative to public works. Legajos nos. 1301-1323.

Policia. One hundred and fifty-seven bundles, years 1800 to 1881, relative to police regulations and the public peace, passports, banishments, tramps, etc. Legajos nos. 1324-1470.

INTRODUCTION.

Plaza de Abastos. Four bundles, years 1805 to 1857, relative to slaughter-houses and markets. Legajos nos. 1471-1474.

Privilegios. Twenty-one bundles, years 1819 to 1867, relative to permits, privileges and franchises. Legajos nos. 1475-1495.

Quintos. Twenty-six bundles, years 1842 to 1860, relative to a 20 per cent. excise tax, the quinto. Legajos nos. 1496-1521.

Sanidad. Forty-nine bundles, years 1803 to 1870, relative to public health and sanitation. Legajos nos. 1522-1570. Cf. the archives of the Junta Superior de Sanidad, described below.

Sociedades. Thirty-nine bundles, years 1844 to 1869, relative to mercantile and industrial corporations, to literary societies and clubs and theatrical companies. Legajo no. 1601 contains documents, years 1814 to 1835, relative to the Real Sociedad Patriótica of Havana. Legajos nos. 1571-1609.

Santo Domingo. Expedientes del Gobierno Superior Civil. Sixteen bundles, years 1861 to 1865, relative to the Spanish government of Santo Domingo during those years. There are in other parts of the Archive a large number of other bundles which are a part of these records. See also no. 272. Legajos nos. 1610-1625.

Tratado de Negros. Eight bundles, years 1821 to 1864, relative to slaves. Legajos nos. 1626-1633.

Adición. Thirty-eight bundles, years 1782 to 1880. Miscellaneous. Contains some interesting documents, e. g., nos. 168, 187, 209 Legajos nos. 1634-1671.

Junta Superior de Sanidad, 1822-1898.

The index to the archives of the Board of Public Health and the local boards (Juntas Subalternas), is published in vol. IV., nos. 3-5, of the Boletín. There are 39 legajos and 22 volumes for the years 1822 to 1898. There is no classification of the material whatever and the bundles do not even follow a chronological order. The titles of the expedientes composing the legajos are however given in each case. The material offers a rich field for the study of public hygienic measures and the prevention of diseases in the tropics, and contains no doubt many data on the spread of and mortality from certain diseases, notably yellow fever and small-pox.

Mapas y Planos.

The list of maps, plans, surveys, etc., of which there exists a large collection in the Archive, has been published in the issues of the Boletín, vol. IV., no. 6, to vol. VI., no. 1. They date, with very few exceptions, from about 1835. They include surveys of the coasts and interior, of roads and rivers, plans of harbors, cities, buildings, etc., and in many cases are important in determining the areas and boundaries of private or public lands.

CLASSES NOT LISTED IN THE BOLETÍN.

Volumes and Bundles of Reales Cédulas and Órdenes. There exist in the Archive about 157 volumes dating from 1523 to 1863 which belonged to the Intendencia. Statements regarding them and lists of them are in appendix A. They are exceedingly valuable for the early history of Cuba and of other parts of Spanish America as well. They constitute a practically inexhaustible source for Cuban history in all that relates to the economic administration and conditions of the island, to commerce and the distribution of population, to the public revenue, to slavery and to the thousand and one matters of local administration. For biography and genealogy they are simply invaluable.

In addition to the volumes there are about 144 legajos dating from 1631 to 1869, about 40 of these being earlier than 1800. These belong likewise to the Intendencia, and are of the same character as the material in the volumes. None of the sets are complete and they duplicate each other very largely. About four copies of each cédula or óden appear to have been received, and very often additional copies, duly certified, were made. The printed cédulas are even more abundant. Nevertheless there are many dispatches which occur only in one of the collections, and a large number have no doubt disappeared entirely. To form as complete a collection as possible from these partial sets would entail considerable labor; but the value of the thing would be beyond all estimation. It is also very desirable that the older cédulas which have suffered from the polilla, and are now scarcely legible to the ordinary person, should be carefully transcribed, and that typewritten copies of the indexes which are usually prefixed to each volume should be made, to serve until the complete collection can be compiled and indexed.

Expedientes de Intendencia.<sup>1</sup> These number over 1900 legajos and date from about 1740, except a few expedientes which may be found dating as early as 1712. They are in two collections, which however are exactly similar in character. One dates from the end of the eighteenth century, and is of about 940 legajos. The other extends back to 1712. This is indexed by expedientes, the former simply by bundles.

INTRODUCTION.

This material is extremely valuable for judicial, and to some degree for historical purposes, for it contains the early records, so far as they exist, of every sale, grant or lease of the public lands or property, of every contract or franchise and of every transaction affecting the public treasury or the public domain.

They contain a good deal of material relating to Louisiana and the Floridas, inasmuch as the situado of those provinces passed through the hands of the intendant, and the provinces had considerable commercial dealings with the island of Cuba.<sup>1</sup>

Bienes Embargados. 226 bundles and 72 volumes, years 1869 to 1878. These contain the records of the landed property and moveables confiscated on political grounds, and are, therefore, not only of great legal importance but of the utmost historical value. They have been carefully arranged by Sr. Ponce de Leon, the assistant archivist.

Correspondence between the Captains-General and the Home Government. A full account of this important material, with a list of 170 documents, will be found on pp. 34-53. It claims a special section in this report.

Juicios y Antecedentes de la Comisión Militar. These are about 115 bundles, years 1811 to 1868. They are the judicial proceedings of the court whose peculiar functions were to try political offenses and ordinary crimes committed in the thinly populated districts, en despoblado. It was established by General Vives as a permanent court, Comisión Militar Permanente, March 4, 1825. The records of the first class have of course overwhelming interest for the history of Cuba. A number of the trials are in the Villanova papers. An almost complete index has been made by the assistant archivist, Señor Ponce de Leon. The records of the second class, Delitos Comunes, number 200 bundles and date from 1823.

Defensa de la Isla. Two legajos corresponding respectively to the years 1797-1843 and 1825-1878. They contain projects for the defense of the island against invasion and for the fortification of particular strategic points, with numerous plans, diagrams, etc.

Ordenación de pagos. The records of the disbursing office, which dates from 1880, comprise over 150 legajos and are exceedingly valuable as evidence in the matter of claims. They exist up to the year 1898, and have been put in order, though no list of them has been printed in the Boletín.

The Villanova Papers, 1777-1875. The late Manuel Villanova, who held the chair of political economy in the Instituto of Havana, was a devoted student of Cuban history and a constant investigator in the Archivo General, as the numerous notes and transcripts in his handwriting which remain testify. Shortly before the Spanish evacuation the Archive appears to have been under the sole oversight of a porter. Availing himself of this circumstance, and of his familiarity with the location of important documents, Señor Villanova contrived to abstract from the Archive and to store secretly in his house as many as sixty-one bundles of papers. They were documents which he deliberately selected because of their importance for the political and economic history of Cuba, and as a whole are unexcelled by any other body of material in the Archive. They date from 1777 to 1875. Señor Villanova's idea was to prevent these documents from being taken to Spain and to preserve them to the Cuban government. Shortly after the Archive was installed in the Cuartel de la Fuerza he returned them. His death removed probably the one man familiar with the organization and materials in the Archivo General, but he bequeathed a priceless treasure to the future historians of Cuba.<sup>1</sup> There has been made so far only a rough list of the documents contained in the first eight or ten legajos, and there has been no attempt to separate the material and to return particular documents to their places, e. g., the letters of the intendant (see p. 15). The material has been arranged roughly by years. The lists in this volume, especially on pp. 57-75, contain numerous documents from this collection, and they are among the choicest to be found in the Archive.

Florida and Louisiana Papers. Seven bundles. A full account of these papers together with titles and descriptions of individual documents will be found on pp. 76-111. The material claims a special section in this report.

<sup>1</sup> The following sketch of Manuel Villanova y Fernández is given by Calcagno in his Diccionario Biográfico Cubano, p. 684. "Nació en Puerto Príncipe, abril, 1844. Estudió en la Habana y en los Estados Unidos; en marzo, 1859, tomó parte en la expedición del Africán, mandada por J. E. Hernández, y el mismo año fué a España, donde residió hasta enero, 1861. En 1868 se unió al movimiento revolucionario del Camagüey, hasta mayo, 1871, en que dejó de militar en la Revolución. Entonces se trasladó a la Habana, donde cultivó las letras y colaboró en El Triunfo, Revista de Cuba, Revista Económica, Unión de Guines y Palanques. En 1882 fundó La Lucha, periódico liberal independiente que duró 14 números. Prepara una obra Historia de la Circulación Monetaria en Cuba." The manuscript, together with a large number of documents, originals and transcripts, for this extensive work on the monetary history of Cuba, are fortunately preserved in the library of the Archive.

Cuban Revolution, 1895 to 1898. A portion of the archives of the revolutionary government has been deposited in the Archivo Nacional and is accessible to the public. The following statement in regard to them has been kindly supplied by Señor Poyo, Director of the Archive:

"The papers existing in this office belonging to the archives of the revolutionary government comprise from the Constituent Assembly of Jimaguayú, 1895, to the dissolution of the Executive Commission of the Assembly of 1898, divided into the following classes:

"I. Assemblies (records of proceedings, etc.);

"II. Archives of the Council of Government and Executive Commission;

"III. War;

"IV. Foreign affairs;

"V. Finance;

"VI. Interior.

"The documents are in pretty fair condition, although some volumes of class I. are somewhat soiled. They were delivered to the Archive in 1902 by order of the government by Señores Juan Gualberto Gómez, General José Laceret Marlot and Colonel Aurelio Hevia, who formed the Executive Commission of the Revolutionary Assembly.

"In addition General José Miró, chief of the Revising and Liquidating Commission of the Cuban army, sent the archives of the regiment Mayarí, the archives of the Interior of the eastern province, and a portion of the archives of the civil government.

"It is impossible to state exactly the number of legajos and volumes comprised in these archives on account of the unorganized condition in which they were delivered."

Archives of Santiago de Cuba. These are the records of the governorship of the province of Santiago, which till 1800 was in large measure independent in civil affairs of the captaincy-general at Havana (see p. 28). The records date from about 1736 to about 1841 and amount to about 190 legajos. The papers are in a very damaged and confused condition and most of the dockets are no longer legible. A partial examination showed that the bundles were very incomplete, but that nevertheless there was material of great interest among them. A number of the papers which are now kept in certain drawers have been extracted from these legajos, e. g., no. 422. It was not found feasible to examine these papers very closely, on account of the time which it would have required and the difficulty of subsequently identifying the bundles. But the material would certainly repay careful examination, and it is to be hoped that it will be possible before long for the Archive to arrange them in some systematic way. The following analysis of them, made from the old index and partly from the bundles themselves, has been kindly supplied by Señor Julio Ponce de Leon, the assistant archivist. It must be borne in mind, however, that the bundles are in nearly all cases only fragments of their former selves, and that the docket dates are often misleading.

6. Undetermined. About 24 legajos, without dockets.

The archives of the Audiencia of Santiago de Cuba, including the archives of the Audiencia of Puerto Príncipe which had been removed to Santiago de Cuba, were brought to Havana in 1900 and placed in the Archivo Judicial (see p. 8). They occupied 60 cases, but were in a lamentable condition, almost entirely destroyed by the polilla.<sup>1</sup>

PROVINCIAL AND ECCLESIASTICAL ARCHIVES.

PUERTO PRINCIPE.

The archives of Puerto Principe (most commonly known as Camagüey) now consist of very recent materials, and aside from a small number of old imprints there is nothing there to repay the historical investigator.

SANTIAGO.

At Santiago de Cuba, which the writer visited during his mission, there are both the municipal and provincial archives and the archiepiscopal archives. The former contain the very valuable ancient volumes of minutes or proceedings of the ayuntamiento of which mention has already been made (p. 18). The material relating to the governorship of Santiago was removed to Havana during the Spanish regime and is now in the Archivo Nacional. Some account of it is given on p. 23. The more recent material was no doubt taken to Spain when the Spanish government evacuated the island. Among the expedientes de ayuntamiento (see pp. 13-14) are many relating to Santiago de Cuba.

The archiepiscopal archives of Santiago de Cuba, which once contained material of considerable general interest, now preserve in the main only material dating from about 1850, and almost wholly of ecclesiastical interest. In 1882 the archives were installed in new quarters and the ancient material, which was found to be so deteriorated as to be unserviceable, was destroyed. A few indexes remain however to show in some measure what has perished. There was, of course, correspondence of the bishops of Santiago and the reales cédulas and órdenes addressed to them, and there were the expedientes concerning ecclesiastical and civil affairs, among them certain ones relating to East Florida and Louisiana, e. g., two of May 17, 1787, and May 26, 1788, dealing with the visit of Fr. Cirilo de Barcelona to the province of Louisiana. The indexes are, however, for the most part of bundles and not of individual papers. The archives of the cabildo or chapter, which are in the cathedral building itself, contain original volumes of acts or proceedings of the chapter dating into the early seventeenth century. There are also three volumes of reales cédulas addressed to the dean and chapter, viz., date 1622-1767 (128 pieces), 1767-1788 (234 pieces), 1788-1830 (51 pieces), and one bundle, 1755-1847 (about 95 pieces). They contain also a few letters and minutes of the chapter. There are very few pieces which relate in any way to East Florida or Louisiana, but one which was found deserves mention, viz., a cédula of March 29, 1660, stating that the bishop of Santiago had written, under date of October 5, 1645, that for forty years no bishop of his diocese had visited the province of Florida and that in consequence the greater part of the people had not received the sacrament of confirmation, and requesting the chapter to report on the convenience and means of establishing a convent in the province.

THE EPISCOPAL ARCHIVES OF HAVANA.

The materials of historical value in the episcopal archives of Havana consist of about eighteen volumes of reales cédulas, dating from 1718 to 1845, and about six bundles of correspondence, dating from 1802 to 1831. The material which exists subsequent to these dates was not examined. The table below shows in brief the contents of the volumes and bundles.

The island of Cuba formed, until the year 1788, a single diocese governed by the bishop of Santiago de Cuba. The island of Jamaica (until the year 1655), the province of Florida (from 1567), and the province of Louisiana (from 1769) were also under the jurisdiction of the bishop of Cuba. In 1732 a suffragan bishop was appointed to reside in Florida (see items nos. 312, 313, in this report). In 1788 the island was divided into two dioceses, an eastern and a western, the bishop of Santiago was given the title of archbishop and a bishop of Havana was created suffragan to him. The bishopric of Havana not only enjoyed larger revenues but comprised within its jurisdiction the provinces of Louisiana and the Floridas while these remained possessions of the Spanish crown. It must be noted, however, that before 1788, though the cathedral church was at Santiago de Cuba, the bishops resided generally at Havana. This explains the presence of the volumes of cédulas in the archives of Havana. From both the episcopal archives of Havana and of Santiago the bulk of the ancient records has disappeared and only fragments remain. For the main facts in the history of the two bishoprics, see Pezuela, Diccionario Geográfico, Estadístico, Histórico, s. vv. "Arzobispado de Santiago de Cuba," "Obispado de la Habana," and "Obispos."

MATANZAS.

The archives of the provincial government of Matanzas were investigated by Mr. Roscoe R. Hill on behalf of the Carnegie Institution. It was found that the repository consisted of two large rooms, one devoted to the papers of more recent date, the other to the older material. The former have in part been arranged as far back as the eighties, and a register or list of legajos 1 to 170 has been compiled, giving the contents of each legajo. Most, if not all, of this material appears to be of purely local interest.

The room containing the older material is little more than a rubbish heap. There are a few registers running back into the early eighteenth century, but even with their help it would prove well-nigh impossible to locate particular bundles or papers.

It is plainly the duty of the provincial government to take steps to preserve these ancient records, whose value for local history is no doubt very great. The expense would be small, but the service would be invaluable to future generations who will desire a knowledge of the past history of their country.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF CUBA.

THE following account of the main features of the administration of the island is introduced at this point in order that the reader may understand more clearly the various records described in this report, by seeing the relations which they respectively bore to that administrative system.

There are three well-defined periods in the administration of the island. The first ends in 1764 with the creation of the intendant-general of the army and treasury (intendente general de ejército y real hacienda) wholly independent of the captain-general; the third dates from the decrees of 1853–1854, conferring on the latter the supreme and direct authority over financial and military, as well as political and civil, affairs.

The authority which the captain-general exercised before 1764 was considerably less than that of the viceroys of New Spain and Peru, or even of the captain-general of the Philippines, for he was subject in judicial matters to the audiencia of Santo Domingo (till 1795), presided over by the captain-general of that island, and in financial matters to the viceroy of New Spain; and though he held the supreme military command over the entire island, the eastern half, from 1607 to 1801, was in civil matters independent of his jurisdiction, having its own governor who received his instructions direct from the crown.<sup>1</sup> Till 1551 the care of the revenues was committed to the governor, but in that year the so-called oficiales reales, viz., an auditor (contador) and a treasurer (tesorero), were appointed, to whom the royal instructions (cédulas, etc.) were addressed conjointly with the governor. The latter could not act in matters affecting the treasury without consulting them, and they sat with him to judge cases of prize and contraband. They received the situados for Porto Rico, Santo Domingo, and Florida,<sup>2</sup> and administered the numerous appropriations for Cuba, which were assessed on the treasury of New Spain. They were required to send their accounts each year to Mexico to be audited, but this they seldom did, and the difficulties which the system encountered led to the establishment in 1638 of the tribunal de cuentas<sup>3</sup> of Havana with a single auditor for Cuba, Porto Rico, Santo Domingo, and Florida, to whom was added a second in 1660. The volumes of cédulas of the tribunal de cuentas are, with the exception of a small number of those addressed conjointly to the governor and oficiales reales, the oldest documents preserved in the Archivo Nacional.<sup>1</sup>

By real cédula of October 31, 1764 (i. e., of the year following the English occupation of Havana), the general intendency of the army and treasury (intendencia general de ejército y real hacienda) was established.<sup>2</sup> This abolished the oficiales reales, deprived the governor of any control over the finances, and made the intendant president of the tribunal de cuentas. This official had under his immediate control the administration of the public revenues in the three branches, civil, ecclesiastical, and military, including the commissary and quartermaster departments, the fortifications, hospitals and pensions both military and civil; the jurisdiction in matters of commerce and contraband; the administration of the royal lands (realengas) and properties, and of the lottery (created in 1812). His rôle was thus quite as important as that of the governor and captain-general, to whom he was not subordinate but equal in rank,<sup>3</sup> receiving his instructions from and communicating directly with the crown. By real orden of March 23, 1812,<sup>4</sup> intendencias were created at Puerto Príncipe and Santiago de Cuba, and the intendant-general at Havana became also super-intendant-general of the treasury (superintendente general delegado de real hacienda). This system prevailed till by real orden of October 21, 1853, the intendency of Puerto Príncipe was abolished and the super-intendance was made over to the captain-general, who was thereby given the immediate control over the entire financial and fiscal administration previously exercised by the super-intendant. The intendency thus became merely a branch or department of the captaincy-general.

<sup>2</sup> See Zamora, Legislación Ultramarina, vol. III., pp. 597 ff., for the text of the royal instruction of the same date which defined at great length the duties and jurisdiction of this important branch of the government. Cf. the famous Real Ordenanza para el Establecimiento e Instrucción de Intendentes de Ejército y Provincia en el Reino de la Nueva-España (Madrid, 1786). By reales órdenes of November 19, 1791, and July 24, 1798, the intendant of Cuba was instructed to adapt this ordinance to the island, so far as the circumstances permitted.

<sup>3</sup> For the relations between the two authorities see Zamora, II. 176 ff., and Sedano, Cuba desde 1850-1875, p. 6. The real orden of March 4, 1844, finally gave the captain-general the preference of rank.

The principal offices, or divisions, of the treasury were the following:

1. The central office of intendance (and super-intendance after 1812), la secretaría;
2. The audit-office (contaduría general de ejército y real hacienda), which during most of its history was also the treasury proper (tesorería general);<sup>1</sup>
3. The customs-office (administración general de rentas marítimas);
4. The land-office (administración general de rentas terrestres);
5. The office for the administration of the properties of the religious orders (administración principal de bienes de regulares);
6. The pension-office (monte pio militar or monte de piedad);
7. The lottery-office (administración general de la renta de lotería).

There was above all the tribunal de cuentas, presided over by the intendant, to which all proposed expenditures or financial measures were first submitted for approval, no matter to what office or appropriation they pertained, and to which all accounts were ultimately rendered for auditing before going to the minister of finance in Spain. This body exercised also certain judicial functions, but these pertained essentially to the courts of the treasury, the junta superior directiva contenciosa de hacienda,<sup>2</sup> whose jurisdiction extended to suits to which the treasury was a party and to causes both civil and criminal against officials of the treasury.

The captain-general before 1858 was entrusted only with the defense of the island, the maintenance of order and loyalty in all the territory and the supervision over the civil and judicial administration. The navy was immediately under the direction of the comandante general del apostadero de la Habana. The civil administration was conducted largely by juntas, or boards, each entrusted with some special branch. The principal of these were the boards of health, charity (beneficencia), public instruction (inspección de estudios), and public works, over all of which the captain-general presided; but over the interests which were respectively committed to them he had only a general oversight and could take no action on them without the concurrence of the respective juntas. By far the most important and influential of the boards was the junta de fomento created under the name of consulado by real cédula of April 4, 1794.<sup>3</sup>

Its primitive functions were the protection and encouragement of agriculture and commerce in all their branches, and the administration of justice in mercantile litigations.<sup>1</sup> It was composed of a prior, two consuls, nine counsellors (consiliarios), and a syndic, of whom the prior and five counsellors were required to be landed proprietors and the others merchants, though the syndic could be of either class. The captain-general was its president (till 1832 and again after 1841), as he was constitutionally of all the civil and public corporations in the island. The real cédula of February 1, 1832, extending the Spanish commercial code of 1829 to the island of Cuba, modified somewhat the organization of the consulado,<sup>2</sup> which from that time took the name of junta de fomento, and the super-intendant of the treasury became its president, till 1841, when the office reverted to the captain-general.

The governors and lieutenant-governors of the provinces, who were charged with the civil administration, as well as with the military commands, and who presided over the local ayuntamientos, were immediately subject to the governor-general,<sup>3</sup> though their appointments were made directly by the crown. The captain-general presided over the ayuntamiento of Havana and was de jure president of all the ayuntamientos of the island, and of all public corporations.

The real orden of May 28, 1825, invested the governor-general with absolute authority in the event of a crisis endangering the peace and preservation of the island,<sup>4</sup> and he was at liberty summarily to banish any person dangerous to the peace of the island. In all ordinary circumstances, however, the captain-general had to consult the junta de autoridades, consisting of the governor himself, the intendant (the super-intendant after 1812), and the commander of the navy (comandante general del apostadero), which was a considerable limitation on his authority and initiative.

Friction between the local authorities, especially between the intendant and captain-general, was frequent, and seriously affected the administration, notably during the governorship of Tacón. The critical situation of the island in the period from 1848 to 1852 and the influence of the captain-general José Gutiérrez de la Concha finally brought about the centralization of authority. By decree of October 21, 1853, the captain-general was made super-intendant and by another of August 17, 1854, the functions which had been distributed among the juntas or boards were entrusted directly to him, and the juntas made responsible to him. The captain-general of Cuba was thus for the first time vested with that comprehensive authority which formerly the viceroys of Mexico and Peru had exercised.

There is no comprehensive work on the administration of Cuba, describing the changes introduced at various times, but the following works contain the detailed information, so far as it is available.

The Gaceta de la Habana is the complete store-house of the laws, decrees, regulations, and all public official documents issued either by the home government or by the local authorities. It dates back to 1782 with the same title. From 1854 there exists the Colección de Reales Ordenes y Disposiciones de las Autoridades Superiores de la Isla de Cuba, publicadas en la Gaceta de la Habana, a series issued annually, with a few interruptions, up to 1898. The Boletín Oficial del Ministerio de Ultramar (eleven volumes) contains the laws and decrees from 1869 to 1879 and forms the sequel to Rodríguez San Pedro's Legislación Ultramarina. The Compilación Legislativa del Gobierno y Administración Civil de Ultramar, 1886-1894 (ten volumes), compiled by Manuel Fernández Martín, completes the series.

DOCUMENTS ON THE RELATIONS BETWEEN CUBA AND THE UNITED STATES.<sup>1</sup>

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE CAPTAINS-GENERAL WITH THE HOME GOVERNMENT, 1820-1865.

THE following is a list of dispatches which relate to the political affairs of Cuba, especially to Cuban foreign relations. They are to be found scattered through sixty-five or seventy bundles of correspondence containing over 20,000 documents, of which no list or index whatever exists. The letters are however briefed on the outside, and so folded and arranged that the briefs can be read by simply turning the documents over. Their examination and use is therefore rendered practicable, though requiring some time and patience. Each dispatch is confined to one subject, so that search on a particular topic is perfectly feasible.

There are no dispatches from the captain-general before 1822. Those earlier must be discovered in Spain among the mass of papers sent to Seville in 1888-1889, and to some extent among the papers carried away in 1898. There are very few dispatches after 1851. Those later are probably all to be found among the papers carried away in 1898, at all events among the letter-files of the various ministries in Spain, especially of the former Ministry of Ultramar. Those which actually exist in the Archivo Nacional of Cuba cover the years 1822, 1826 to 1829, 1833 and 1836 to 1851 inclusive, but even for these years they are not quite complete. They are tied up in bundles by years and are supposed to be arranged chronologically, irrespective of the ministries to which they are addressed. Each captain-general began with number 1, and the dispatches to each ministry were numbered consecutively. The proper arrangement of these dispatches would be by ministries, bringing together in chronological order the dispatches relating to affairs of state, to internal affairs, to justice, etc. The legajos containing the dispatches of the captains-general are arranged together with the bundles of reales órdenes, i. e., with the dispatches to the captains-general, in one series numbering at least 180 bundles, and all of them originally bore indiscriminately the docket-legend, Reales órdenes de gobernación.

The reales órdenes date from 1812 to 1898, but they differ widely. Those from 1812 to about 1854 are the communications to the captain-general from the various ministries, dealing with every subject. They number about 65 legajos, and are arranged in the same way as the dispatches from the captains-general and briefed, with some exceptions. Between 1812 and 1820 they are very incomplete; between 1836 and 1852 probably 90 per cent. exist, including the secret and ultra-secret dispatches (reservado and muy reservado). They also should be arranged according to ministries. They are not as a rule numbered.

The bundles after 1854 consist (1) of dispatches addressed to the superintendente general delegado de real hacienda, i. e., to the captain-general in his capacity as intendant-general,<sup>1</sup> and (2) of dispatches from the Ministry of Ultramar (1863-1898) dealing almost entirely with ordinary administrative affairs. It is from them that the collection received the label Gobernación. These dispatches are not briefed; the first 18 or 20 legajos contain lists of the dispatches, in the form of briefs, but the secret communications are merely indicated by the word "reservado," and are, with rare exceptions, missing. When these lists fail it becomes practically impossible to deal with the material, as the bundles are very large, averaging about 1500 dispatches to the legajo. But from a partial examination the whole collection appeared to contain very little material of any interest not printed in the Havana Gazette and its epitome the Colección de Reales Órdenes y Disposiciones Oficiales, 1854-1898, or in the other legislative series mentioned on pages 32-33.

The list presented on the ensuing pages, while it does not pretend to be exhaustive, covers the greater number of the dispatches both to and from the captain-general relating to the political affairs of the island, to the attitude of the United States and Great Britain, to the all-important subject of slavery and to revolutionary movements both in and out of the island. This material contains much that is new in the way of information, but it is even more valuable for the point of view from which it regards the diplomacy of the United States and Great Britain and the internal conditions in the island. Neither the Spanish régime in Cuba, nor the diplomacy of Spain, nor the internal conditions in the island can be correctly represented if the facts are gathered, as heretofore, simply from American and British state

José Cienfuegos from July 2, 1816 to August 29, 1819.

Juan Manuel de Cagigal from August 29, 1819 to March 3, 1821.

Nicolas de Mahy from March 3, 1821 to July 18, 1822 (died July 23, 1822).

Sebastian de Kindelan from July 18, 1822 to May 2, 1823.

Francisco Dionisio Vives from May 2, 1823 to May 15, 1832.

Mariano Ricafort from May 15, 1832 to June 1, 1834.

Miguel Tacon (Marqués de la Union de Cuba) from June 1, 1834 to April 21, 1838.

Joaquin de Ezpeleta from April 21, 1838 to January 10, 1840.

Príncipe de Anglona (Pedro Tellez Giron, Marqués de Javalquinto) from January 10, 1840 to March 6, 1841.

Gerónimo Valdés from March 6, 1841 to September 15, 1843.

Francisco Javier de Ulloa from September 15, 1843 to October 21, 1843.

Leopoldo O'Donnell (Duque de Tetuan, Conde de Lucena, Vizconde de Aliaga, etc.) from October 21, 1843 to March 29, 1848.

Federico Roncali (Conde de Alcoy) from March 29, 1848 to November 11, 1850.

José Gutiérrez de la Concha (later Marqués de la Habana) from November 11, 1850 to April 16, 1852.

Valentin Cañedo from April 16, 1852 to December 3, 1853.

Juan de la Pezuela (Marqués de la Pezuela) from December 3, 1853 to September 21, 1854.

José Gutiérrez de la Concha (Marqués de la Habana), second administration from September 21, 1854 to November 24, 1859.

1808-1818. Losses caused by pirates to the merchants of Havana.

By real órden of July 18, 1817, the intendant was instructed to secure evidence of injuries to the crown and subjects of Spain, caused directly or indirectly by the conduct of the government or subjects of the United States. The merchants of Havana were thereupon requested by the intendant to supply him with statements of their losses from pirates or insurgent privateers since the year 1808. The information obtained was embodied in an expediente, entitled, Report showing the losses which the commercial houses of Havana have suffered in their maritime expeditions since the year 1808, a document of about 100 pages, containing a multitude of interesting details relative to the commerce of the time, as well as to the activities of the pirates. The losses of 86 houses were estimated at 2,733,584 dollars from September, 1808, to the year 1817. Two other expedientes were subsequently formed to complete the report of these losses. The three expedientes are enclosed with letters of the intendant of dates November 17, 1817, no. 58; January 11, 1818, no. 559; and April 23, 1818. Cf. nos. 204, 212. 193

1810-1823. Aids of money, provisions, etc., to Spanish colonies; Spanish American finances.

The intendants' dispatches show very fully the conditions of the treasures of Cuba, Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia, Chile, Peru, Santo Domingo and Porto Rico in the period of the wars of independence, 1810 to 1823, and especially in the later years. The resources at the disposal of the Spanish governments to carry on the struggle were vitally important in determining the course and issue of the revolutions. The intendants' dispatches also reveal incidentally many details of the struggle.

See especially the following:

El intendente dice que arribaron [de Méjico] á este puerto 150,000 pesos con destino á Puerto Rico á entregar á desposición del comisionado D. Antonio Ygnacio de Cortabarria, y otros 50,000 pesos para el capitán general de Venezuela; que ha dispuesto su envío á Puerto Rico y á Maracaibo. Diciembre 30, 1810, no. 250, legajo 484.

El intendente acompaña las cartas del intendente de Puerto Rico y del Subdelegado de la Aguadilla que el primero le dirigió contraidas á la retirada que hizo á Puerto Cabello D. Domingo Monteverde, capitán general de Venezuela, dejando abandonado el resto de la provincia á las armas de Bolívar; manifiesta sus deseos de auxiliar á Puerto Cabello no obstante la escasez de medios conque cuenta: ofrece avisar las noticias que adquiera. Agosto 26, 1813, no. 869, legajo 488.

The letter of the intendant of Porto Rico bears date August 12, 1813, and the other, from José Martín Domenech, August 1, 1813.

FLORIDA AND LOUISIANA PAPERS.

THE entire archives of the Spanish provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, including also many records relating to East Florida, were removed to Havana in the year 1819,<sup>1</sup> or thereabout, when the Spanish government resolved upon the cession of the Floridas. These archives consisted of more than 730 bundles, according to the inventories which were made of them in 1888 and 1889 (see pp. 8-6). Such of these records as related to the sovereignty of the ceded territory and to property rights therein should have been delivered to the government of the United States in accordance with article II. of the treaty of cession—"His Catholic Majesty cedes to the United States . . . archives and documents which relate directly to the property and sovereignty of said provinces. The said archives and documents shall be left in possession of the commissioners or officers of the United States duly authorized to receive them." The United States commissioners, however, failed to obtain any of these documents from the archives of the Cuban intendancy. Some account of their efforts may be found among the documents printed in American State Papers, Foreign Relations, IV. 740-808, relating to the delivery of the Floridas. It is stated that ten boxes sent from Pensacola were lost. In a letter from J. G. Forbes to John Quincy Adams, secretary of state, dated Havana, May 5, 1821, the former reported that the register of the records had informed him "that about ten boxes containing the records of grants of land in West Florida were taken by an insurgent privateer out of the vessel in which Governor Mazot was a passenger from Pensacola" (ibid., IV. 748). A similar report was made by the intendant Ramirez to his government, but still the evidence appears by no means conclusive. Between 1830 and 1835 the United States government appointed various commissioners, among whom were Jeremy Robinson, R. H. Call, R. J. Cleveland and N. P. Trist (as consul) to recover the documents which had become the property of the United States by article II. of the treaty of 1819. The commissioners wrote much but achieved little. Their correspondence, journals, credentials, etc., in the archives of the Department of State, <sup>1</sup> "In the year 1819, there were sent to Havana from West Florida various boxes of papers of the archives of that province, in disorder and without indexes." (Letter of governor-general of Cuba, Nicolas Mahy, to J. G. Forbes, May 16, 1821. American State Papers, Foreign Relations, IV. 746.

Bureau of Rolls and Library, make three large bundles and there are also many of their papers in the Division of Manuscripts of the Library of Congress, and a large number in the Archivo Nacional, Havana. (For a partial list of these papers, as well as a list of the documents which the commissioners eventually secured, recorded in an inventory made by N. P. Trist, see appendix B, pages 117-121).

In the years 1888 and 1889 the Louisiana and Florida archives were removed to the Archive of the Indies at Seville, where their condition has apparently proceeded from bad to worse.<sup>1</sup> See the Introduction, pp. 4-6. About 8 bundles were left behind at Havana, probably through inadvertence. Three of these bundles are in the series of the "Expedientes de Intendencia" (for which see pp. 19-20) and bear docket numbers 596-598. They contain, in the main, records regarding the public (royal) lands and property, deeds of sales and grants, and innumerable petitions requesting specified pieces of land. They would no doubt prove of considerable interest for local history and genealogy, but it was not found feasible to calendar these papers individually.<sup>2</sup> The other bundles are marked simply "Florida" or "Florida Correspondence" and contain a variety of documents between the years 1770 and 1821. One of these bundles has docket number 828. Their character can be judged from the chronological lists which follow, and which include all the papers except such as seemed to possess but very slight interest.

In addition to these bundles containing almost exclusively Florida and Louisiana documents, there are in the series of "Expedientes de Intendencia," in the series of Reales Cédulas, and among the dispatches of the intendant (see pp. 14-15) many records and letters concerning the general administration, the commerce and the finances of the provinces. Note of these is made under the corresponding years in the lists which follow. Other papers of interest, it should be mentioned, may be found in the lists of documents concerning the ecclesiastical history of the Floridas and Louisiana, separately printed in this report. See also nos. 503, 509, 519, and 521 in Appendix C.

EAST FLORIDA, ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY, 1696-1786.

THE documents indicated in the following list are principally reales cédulas to the treasury officials of Cuba and to the Bishop of Santiago de Cuba. The latter are to be found in the collection of volumes in the Episcopal Archive of Havana, in the building called the Obispado (see pp. 24-25). It was principally in connection with the situado for the Franciscan missions of Florida, which the oficiales reales (see p. 25) received from Mexico and administered with more or less liberty, that the royal dispatches were issued. They contain a multitude of details which throw light not only on religious conditions themselves but in no small degree also on the administration of the province and on its commercial and economic situation. Those addressed to the bishop have a similar interest. In 1732 a bishop, suffragan to the bishop of Santiago de Cuba, was appointed to reside in Florida (see nos. 312, 313). Nearly all the documents after 1770 relate to the Catholic families from Mahon (Minorca), in the Balearic Islands, who were established at or near St. Augustine. In addition to whatever interest the information concerning those emigrants may have for the historian, the documents reveal many details of the life of the time worth preserving.

APPENDIX A.

LIST OF VOLUMES OF REALES CEDULAS AND ÓRDENES IN THE ARCHIVO NACIONAL.

THESE constitute one of the most precious historical treasures of the Archivo Nacional (cf. p. 19). The following lists were compiled directly from the volumes themselves and are often at variance with the binders' dates. They fall into several series none of which is complete. The volumes are all of folio size.

The following statement in regard to the distribution of the business of state among the ministries at various periods may perhaps be useful in connection with these collections of royal dispatches.

In 1705 Philip V. divided the work and organization of the Council of the Indies (created 1524) into two departments, assigning to one of them the affairs of war and finance. In 1714 he created five divisions of the general Spanish administration, viz.: (1) State, (2) War, (3) Justice, (4) Navy and Indies, and (5) Finance (known also as the Intendencia Universal). In 1717 these were reduced to three, viz.: (1) State, (2) War and Navy, and (3) Justice, the Interior and Finance. Ferdinand VI., in 1754 and 1755, re-established the former arrangement under five ministries, and these were increased to seven in 1787 by the addition of two ministries exclusively for the Indies, viz.: (1) Justice, and (2) War, Finance, Commerce, and Navigation. Charles IV. again reduced them to five, in 1790, and distributed the affairs of the Indies among the respective ministries. The Constitution of 1812 made them again seven, by adding two ministries of the interior (Gobernación), one for the kingdom and one for the colonies (Ultramar). The latter were abolished by decree of June, 1814, which established the ministry of the Indies in the form in which it existed before 1787. The seven ministries were re-established in 1820, and again reduced in 1823. In 1832 a ministry of the Interior, for both Spain and the colonies, was created under the name of Fomento, changed to Interior in 1834 and in 1835 to Gobernación. In 1847 matters relating to commerce, public instruction, and public works were taken from it and assigned to a new ministry of Comercio, Instrucción y Obras Públicas, called, from 1851, the ministry of Fomento. The affairs of the colonies were separated from the ministry of the Interior (Gobernación) in 1836, and were distributed respectively among all the ministries. At the same time the ministry of the Navy became Navy, Commerce, and Interior for the colonies (Marina, Comercio y Gobernación de Ultramar). This arrangement prevailed till 1863, and during these years each ministry communicated directly and freely with the colonial authorities. By decree of May 20, 1863, the ministry of the colonies, Ministerio de Ultramar, was created, having under its control all colonial affairs except matters pertaining to State, War and Navy. But it alone conducted the official correspondence with the colonial authorities. The decisions in affairs of State, War and Navy were transmitted to the ministry of Ultramar and by it communicated to the captains-general. The departments (negociados) of this ministry were at first (1) Gobierno y Fomento, (2) Gracia y Justicia, (3) Hacienda, and (4) Contabilidad, including the Ordenación de Pagos, but these were changed in 1865 to (1) Gobernación, (2) Administración y Fomento, (3) Negocios eclesiásticos y Gracia y Justicia, and (4) Hacienda. This distribution, however, was several times varied.

I. Series of the Tribunal de Cuentas, 1523–1863. 94 volumes.

Consists of copies certified from the office of the Contaduría General, where the originals remained. Each volume has a list of its contents in the form of a brief of each document. These briefs are also on the documents themselves and were put on either at the home office or at the office of the Tribunal de Cuentas. Each volume contains on the average about 550 leaves. The leaves are numbered in each volume, but the documents are not, as they are in some of the other series. Volumes 1–9, 1523–1790, are copies of the original volumes made by D. Antonio Ildefonso Betancourt, probably at the close of the eighteenth century. In a note to the first volume it is explained that the originals were much worn, eaten and incomplete.

APPENDIX C.

LIST OF DOCUMENTS IN THE DIVISION OF MANUSCRIPTS OF THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS, PARTLY FROM THE CUBAN ARCHIVES.

THE following papers in the Division of Manuscripts of the Library of Congress were part of a collection belonging to Domingo Delmonte y Aponte,<sup>1</sup> a Cuban known at home and abroad for his breadth of historical learning and for his literary compositions,—the friend and associate of Heredia, Saco, Luz, Poëy and Bachiller. He visited Madrid in 1838–1839, and in the latter year was made a member of the special commission appointed by the Real Sociedad Patriótica of Havana for preparing an edition of the work of Arrate and for gathering materials for the history of Cuba. In December, 1843, he left the island, and in the following July the Military Commission decreed his imprisonment for complicity in the alleged negro conspiracy of 1844. (Cf. no. 526.) In 1846 he settled in Madrid, where he resided with slight interruptions till his death in 1858. He left in manuscript a history of Cuba—Teatro de la Isla Fernandina<sup>2</sup>—which remains unpublished. He gathered for this work a large number of documents, both originals and transcripts. He possessed also an exceedingly rich collection of books and pamphlets, many of which also have come into the possession of the Library of Congress. Cf. Catalogue of the remarkable Library collected in Spain, Cuba and the United States by the Family of Del Monte, consisting . . . of . . . Spanish Americana . . . to be sold . . . 1888 (New York, G. A. Leavitt and Co., 1888), and Catalogue of . . . Spanish Books relating to Cuba . . . collected by the late Domingo and Leonardo Del Monte, . . . for sale at auction . . . May 8 and 9, 1901, by John Anderson, Jr., New York.

The documents in the Library of Congress, consisting of 4 bundles and 2 volumes (nos. 497 and 524), were purchased for a small sum at Anderson's sale, and are nos. 120–124, and 126, in the catalogue cited.

The presumption is that a number of these papers were secured by Delmonte from the Cuban archives, while a member of the history commission of the Real Sociedad Patriótica, but many of them he secured at Madrid or elsewhere in Spain.

Those which are subsequent to 1853 came in some way into the possession of his brother Leonardo (for they are described by the

The documents relate to commerce, colonization, slavery and the negro traffic, financial administration, etc. Among them the following may be noted:

Relación de las ciudades, villas y lugares que se hallan comprendidos en el distrito de la jurisdicción de la Habana con otras particularidades, con arreglo á los capítulos de la Instrucción de D. Julian de Arriaga, en carta de 1º. de mayo de 1758 al gobernador y capitán general de la isla de Cuba. 1759. Leaves 26-125.

Extracto de los papeles de D. Joseph de Avalos, natural de la Habana, sobre el proyecto que propone en representación de 6 de julio de 1768, en beneficio y utilidad de la isla de Cuba para aumentar la real hacienda y ponerla en disposición de no estar pendiente de otros auxilios para atender á todas sus obligaciones, y enriquecerse sus naturales. Julio de 1769. Leaves 130-195.

Informe de la Contaduría del Consejo de Indias sobre el plan de mejoras de la administración de la isla de Cuba, formado por el regente de la audiencia de Puerto Príncipe, D. Joaquín Bernardo de Campuzano. Madrid, diciembre 6, 1825. Leaves 411-415. See no. 233. 497

1683. Description of Havana, etc.

APPENDIX D.

TRANSCRIPTS FROM THE CUBAN ARCHIVES PRESERVED AT GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY.

In the archive-house of Georgetown University are preserved many transcripts made in various foreign archives by the late Dr. John Gilmary Shea. The origin of the papers is not always indicated, but it is plain that some of them are the fruit of a visit to the archives of Cuba made by Dr. Shea about 1883. A draft of a letter to the bishop of Havana, of about that date, shows that, according to what the learned historian was told, the parochial registers of St. Augustine and Pensacola for the periods anterior to the American occupation were at that time in the Episcopal Archives, and that he asked permission to make copies there. The following list indicates such of the transcripts at Georgetown University as are presumed by the editor of the volume to be derived from this source. He owes cordial thanks to the Reverend Professor Edward I. Devitt, S.J., of that institution, for permission to examine the papers.

1690, JANUARY 2. Letter of Diego Ebeleno [Evelino] de Compostela, bishop of Santiago de Cuba, to the dean and chapter of Santiago and the clergy of the diocese, on the conversion of the Florida Indians. Havana. Vol. 33, no. 10, of Georgetown University archives. 543

1697, OCTOBER 16. Letter of Fray Francisco de Contreras to the King of Spain, on the doings of the Franciscans in Florida. Havana. Vol. 33, no. 10. 544

1698, FEBRUARY 26. Extracts of various relations made under oath at the convent of San Francisco in Havana on that date, regarding the activities of missionaries in Florida and elsewhere in 1697. Vol. 33, no. 10. 545

1737, NOVEMBER 14. Don Manuel Joseph de Justiz to the captain-general, on the church in Florida. Havana. Vol. 34, no. 13. 546

1738-1741. Letters of Don Manuel de Montiano, governor of Florida, to the captain-general Don Juan Francisco de Guemes y Horcasitas and others, on the same subject, dated San Agustin or Florida, March 3, 1738, October 28, 1738, January 5, 23, March 6, April 10, 1739, January 7, 1741. Not all are copied entire. Vol. 34, no. 13. 547

1774, MARCH 26. "Extrait d'une lettre écrite par Mgr. l'Évêque de Cuba à sa Majesté le Roi d'Espagne." Recommends the transfer of the Ursulines of Louisiana to Havana. Vol. 34, no. 20. 548

1778, DECEMBER 16. Joseph de Gálvez, secretary of state, to the bishop, on the same subject as no. 331 above, of the same date. Vol. 38, no. 14. 549

1784, APRIL 23. A copy of no. 332, to the bishop, signed Joseph de Gálvez. 550

1804, APRIL 11. Father Thomas Hassett to the Marquis de Casa Calvo. New Orleans. Vol. 94, no. 15. 551
